Beware The Danger Spots

The maturation throughout Canada of new social services, and the extension of social services already existing, are policies to which it is now clear all political parties in Parliament are definitely committed. Since the beginning of the present century there has been a steady growth, not only in Canada but in all countries in the number and scope of these services of a social character, and it is now evident that the people of this Dominion are in favor of more and still larger and comprehensive services of this character.

This development is in line with modern trends and the new conception that all the people are responsible for the welfare of each individual citizen. We refer to this as a new conception, yet it is as old as civilization itself. Man is his brother's keeper and if and when man fails to discharge that responsibility to his fellowmen, then the very civilization which protects him will collapse. So it is that the great majority of people will be found to welcome the introduction and enlargement of a national programme of social services.

There are, however, one or two danger spots in connection with such a programme which the Canadian people will be well advised to recognize at the outset. These services are designed to be helpful to us as individuals and as a nation; let us therefore beware that they do not actually prove harmful.

The first danger to avoid is, that in our enthusiasm and commendable desire to provide social services, and to establish them upon a generous scale, we do not override it, and embark upon programmes which may prove to be beyond the financial capacity of the Canadian people to maintain. Social services such as old age pensions, mother's allowances, unemployment insurance, free medical services, etc., will cost an enormous amount of money annually. Some of these services are already costing the Federal and Provincial Governments many millions of dollars, but present expenditures are undoubtedly small in comparison with the cost of proposals now being advanced.

Each and every one of these social services can be provided and made possible by just one method, and that is taxation. That is, the community as a whole must through the payment of taxes provide the money which will be distributed through one social service or another to the people who are in need of such service. If fifty million dollars are required to pay the payment of old age pensions throughout Canada, then taxes which will yield fifty million in revenue to the government must be imposed and paid by the people. There is no other way. This fact must be recognized together with the further fact that there is a limit beyond which people cannot pay taxes, and any social or other service which depends upon government taxes beyond that limit will find itself in difficulty.

Once established, experience has proven that these social services grow very rapidly and that expenditures largely increase. This experience indicates a second danger spot. It is this: So long as individual man and woman are required to look out for themselves and plan for their future, they will, as a rule, work, exercise some degree of thrift, and save against sickness and old age. In a word, self preservation will be one of the guiding rules of their life. But once it becomes an accepted and established fact that people will be provided for whether they are at work or not, and that the community will care for them and all their ills if and when sick, and that the community will support them throughout their old age and bury them when they die, there is grave danger that the incentive which is now the greatest driving force in our human nature will become less keen, weaker and finally die.

DOES NOT HARM THE HEART

Champion Bricklayer
Philip Lancaster, 24-year-old foreman in a brickyard at Hull, England, lays claim to the title of being the world's champion bricklayer. He laid 3,000 bricks in four hours, a record, he says. In the first hour he laid 908, a little better than 15 a minute.

HE FELT MISERABLE AFTER MEALS

Acute Indigestion Relieved by Kruschen

The treatment which this man right must surely be worth trying in every case of indigestion. Read what he says:

"Two years ago I suffered very much from indigestion, loss of appetite, and a most severe pain in my back. Food rotted in my stomach. I felt most miserable after meals and had no desire or appetite for them. A friend advised me to try Kruschen Salts. I did so, and I am most happy to testify that after a short time I felt the greatest relief. I continued taking Kruschen till I felt myself quite better and a new man. I feel as light-hearted as I did twenty years ago."—W. B.

What Kruschen did for him it will do for everybody else who suffers from indigestion as he did. The fact is that "the little daily dose" of Kruschen first stimulates the flow of gastric juices to aid digestion, and then ensures a complete, regular and unobstructed elimination of all waste matter every day.

New Gold Strike

Sensational Discovery On The North Shore Of Lake Athabasca

Three aeroplanes are busy brightening crews, diamond drill equipment and supplies to what is hailed as a sensational new gold strike at Beaver Lodge, on the north shore of Lake Athabasca. Already there are more than 200 men at the camp, hastily constructed, and more stakers are on their way. Ten day teams recently left Fort Chipewyan for the scene of the discovery.

All reports say that Beaver Lodge is the greatest gold discovery in Canada in many years.

TELLS EXPERIENCE BEFORE A NOTARY

Mrs. Albert Ashley, 1601 Madison Avenue St., Montreal, relates in a sworn statement how Fruit-A-Vit helped her health. She now enjoys life after years of poor health and so you may be sure of instructing Mrs. Ashley of her experience in a statement made under oath. She says: "I was troubled for years with dizzy headaches. My bowels did not function regularly. I had no appetite. I had no sleep. It was difficult for me to do my work. I tried a great many laxatives but found none of them so violent. Finally I started taking Fruit-A-Vit. In a very short time my health became greatly improved. I now enjoy life much more than before I learned about Fruit-A-Vit."—Copy of Mrs. Ashley's statement given to the Montreal Press, Montreal, Quebec, Canada, August 1934.

Little Journeys In Science

COSMIC RAYS

(By Gordon H. Quast, M.A.)

Glass becomes negatively charged when rubbed with catkin, but positively charged when rubbed with silk. Also, a strip of celluloid becomes negatively charged when drawn between the fingers. In order to detect and measure the electric charges on any substance scientists have devised an instrument known as the electro-scope. A simple type of electro-scope consists of a bottle with a paraffin stopper, through which runs a piece of glass tubing. Passed through the glass tube is a piece of brass or copper wire from which are suspended two strips of gold leaf. A ball made of lintol is attached to the other end of the wire and is, of course, outside the bottle just above the paraffin stopper. Whenever the ball is given either a negative or positive charge the leaves fly apart in proportion to the amount of the charge. A rubber comb rubbed on a cat becomes negatively charged and if the comb is placed on the lintol ball some of this charge is imparted to the electro-scope and the leaves fly apart. Since the charge is negative, another negative charge will cause the leaves to spread still farther apart, whereas a positive charge will cause the leaves to fall together before again flying apart. In this way the kinds of charges may be determined. When even the most of electroscopes are charged it is observed that the gold leaves neutralize the charges on the leaves. Scientists set out to discover what was causing this discharge of an electro-scope and found that it was due to certain rays which came to the earth from outer space. They are called cosmic rays.

Many attempts have been made to detect the natural leak or discharge of an electro-scope. These attempts have always failed despite the use of the most perfect insulators and the protection of the electroscopes by lead shields, several feet in thickness. These experiments suggested that there exists an unusually penetrating radiation of feeble intensity.

Scientists have carried electroscopes to points near the two poles of the earth, at the equator, and at various other latitudes. Electroscopes and similar indicating and recording devices have been sent up into the air in sounding balloons to altitudes of over 20 miles, and have been carried to altitudes of 25,000 feet by airplanes in various localities and have been taken to high mountains as well as to depths as great as 1,000 feet in lakes. All experiments show that the rays come from above the earth and so they have been called cosmic rays. Outstanding among various investigators in this work are two American scientists, Millikan and Compton.

Canada to Mexico and now I've come to the end of the trail... Suddenly he knew that, if Edith Carr was at the end of that trail to welcome him, he wanted no other trail.

"All the same that man Dustin's a dirty hound," he muttered. "Now to try to find out what I want... Here's Seco..."

Seco was an ordinary cow-town with a courthouse in the middle of a square from which the rest of the town radiated. He parked in front of a small frame building that bore the sign:

SECO COUNTRY
Evan Jamison, Editor and Prop.

"If any information is to be had it ought to be in a newspaper office," he muttered. "If he hasn't got an encyclopedia I don't know who will have one."

A stouping man rose from a half-recumbent position across a desk and eyed him as he entered. Stone grinned affably and thrust out a hand.

"My name's Stone," he said pleasantly. "I work for Carr at the Hour-glass. Are you Mr. Jamison by any chance?"

"Not by chance, by design and for my sin I think," said Jamison with a sour grin. "What can I do for you?"

"Have you got an encyclopedia in the office and if so, will you let me consult it?"

"Over on the shelf yourself," said Jamison. "Help yourself!"

He watched curiously as Stone took down volume after volume. When he replaced the last with a sigh of disappointment, Jamison became frankly curious.

"Can't you find it?" he asked.

"It's not in the book..." Stone perched on the desk and rolled his cigarette. "Maybe you can help me."

"It's a good guess," said Jamison. "I'm sorry they've got so much hard luck. Now take Joe Carr. He's a fine old fellow but he's dropped behind in the race for money and he will never catch up. He just don't know what it's all about. He's got a good outfit, too, but a good body can't help if the head is gone. Of course he's got a good man in Frank Crew. They don't make many men like Crew..."

"And Edith..." said Stone tentatively.

Jamison's grim face instantly lit with a light that there was no mistake. Even the silence answered Stone's half-formed question.

"Yeah," said Jamison quietly. "Edith..."

"Crew told me that, while Edith was out riding with me, that man Dustin came over to the Hour-glass. He saw old man Carr and told him that he wanted to marry Edith..."

Evan Jamison, the lanky editor of the moribund paper that certainly could not support him, threw himself across his desk and grabbed at Stone's arm.

Mr. Jamison. Have you lived long in this part of the country?"

Jamison went to the dusty window and pointed to the great bulk of Myrnat Peak that thrust above the skyline.

"When I first came here," he said, "that peak was just a hole in the ground. It's grown up since then. I haven't. You say your name's Stone?"

Are you the man who slapped a drink of whisky in Crew's eyes in the Silver Dollar?"

"I reckon I did," said Stone, grinning. "Sometimes I'm mighty careless when I throw my best legs. Why?"

"It was you, too, who had the quarrel with Sam Dustin and who dumped him into Soda Springs, hey?"

Stone nodded. He wondered how and where Jamison had learned of that. Jamison enlightened him.

"My wife heard it..." from a friend and she told me. I haven't said a word about it. I thought it best. Maybe I can help you about that item you want in the encyclopedia," said Jamison shortly.

"First of all..." said Stone, who knew an old desert-rat named Kane.

"Who? Dad Kane? Old man Shanny-skin Kane? They call him that because he always wears a shirt made of chamois skin. He says he can use it with his mercury to try to get gold ore..." when he finds it. Or course I know him."

"Is he straight?"

"Absolutely. That is, he's perfectly honest except in minor matters. He's queer though. Tell me these questions mean."

Stone thrust a hand deep into his coat-pocket and kept it there while he studied Jamison. He liked what he saw and his face broke into a pleasant smile.

"I've been on the Hour-glass payroll for four months now," he said irrelevantly.

"It's a good outfit," said Jamison. "I'm sorry they've got so much hard luck. Now take Joe Carr. He's a fine old fellow but he's dropped behind in the race for money and he will never catch up. He just don't know what it's all about. He's got a good outfit, too, but a good body can't help if the head is gone. Of course he's got a good man in Frank Crew. They don't make many men like Crew..."

"And Edith..." said Stone tentatively.

Jamison's grim face instantly lit with a light that there was no mistake. Even the silence answered Stone's half-formed question.

"Yeah," said Jamison quietly. "Edith..."

"Crew told me that, while Edith was out riding with me, that man Dustin came over to the Hour-glass. He saw old man Carr and told him that he wanted to marry Edith..."

Evan Jamison, the lanky editor of the moribund paper that certainly could not support him, threw himself across his desk and grabbed at Stone's arm.

THIS Great Canadian Illustrated Weekly—produced in Canada by Canadians—for Canadians—one of the world's greatest newspapers—is as Canadian as Hockey and quite as vigorous—with news of the world, stories and articles by world-famed writers and artists and by Canadians of international reputation. A clean, happy, youthful, illustrated newspaper. 5 sections—in fact, 5 newspapers in one—every week—Entertainment—Amusement—Information for every member of the family.

"Tell me that again," he said earnestly. "See if I hear'n' right!" Stone told him curtly and every word sunk in. Jamison nodded once or twice and seated himself on the edge of the desk.

"You listen to me," he said quietly. "You've been some months at the Hour-glass. You must know how things are out there..."

"I thought so. I've heard a lot of you. From... Oh, from some people and what I've heard I like..." Wait...

"I'm a married man, Stone. I've got the finest wife in the world and we've got two kids. One's a boy named for me. The other's a girl, Mabel; named for her mother. Some day when you have kids of your own, you'll understand what I'm try'n' to tell you..."

Last year the boy was taken, might say while I was away. Edith Carr only knew us fairly well but she stopped in from time to time to see if she could help Mabel. I was over at Wilton longer than I expected and I couldn't get back. The third day Sam Young came in from Seco and told me the boy was down with a bad case of diphtheria..."

You may guess what that means in a place like Seco. Our only doctor then was a horse-doctor and he was generally full. I got back as soon as I could make it."

It had been a cold night and Edith Carr, hearin' how sick the boy was, spent it with Mabel. They spent that night try'n' to cook the poison out of him..."

You know how it is I reckon. Know anything about diphtheria?"

"I've heard of it," said Stone. "I've seen it in the papers. It's a terrible thing."

"I've heard of it," said Stone. "I've seen it in the papers. It's a terrible thing."

"I've heard of it," said Stone. "I've seen it in the papers. It's a terrible thing."

"I've heard of it," said Stone. "I've seen it in the papers. It's a terrible thing."

"I've heard of it," said Stone. "I've seen it in the papers. It's a terrible thing."

"I've heard of it," said Stone. "I've seen it in the papers. It's a terrible thing."

"I've heard of it," said Stone. "I've seen it in the papers. It's a terrible thing."

"I've heard of it," said Stone. "I've seen it in the papers. It's a terrible thing."

"I've heard of it," said Stone. "I've seen it in the papers. It's a terrible thing."

"I've heard of it," said Stone. "I've seen it in the papers. It's a terrible thing."

"I've heard of it," said Stone. "I've seen it in the papers. It's a terrible thing."

Stone shook his head. "It stops up all the tubes and chokes the person to death. You've got to be right on the job..." Mabel was played out... She was sick, too... The boy was taken sick in the night at Mabel... Well, she says frankly that she lost her nerve and didn't know what to do... She stood there watching the boy choke to death before her eyes... That's when Edith Carr came in! She saw what was takin' place... she saw Mabel couldn't help herself... She pushed Mabel out of the room, pulled the rubber tube off a hot-water bottle and stuck it down the kid's throat... Then... By God, Stone... She sucked it clear! Do you get that? She gave him back his life. Any need to ask what we think of Edith Carr? There was no need. After one brief glance at Jamison, Stone knew that he could "go the limit."

"I'll tell you why I want to find old Man Kane," he said.

He perched on the desk and told Jamison of his first row with Dustin. He told him of the fight with Crew and Gray in the hills above the ranch. He told how he found out Kane's notebook and of the trip that he took with Edith. Finally he laid on the desk the pieces of rock from the mine.

"I can get Buster right here in town to assay 'em," said Jamison. "He'll not talk if I tell him not to..."

"Go on..."

"Well... we were riding home when Dustin, who had been at the Hour-glass, came peltin' down the trail and tried to ride me down in the galle of cabalo. His horse must have slipped or something for Dustin was upset. Jamison's eyes gleamed at that. While he was 'lyin' there unconscious, I went through his pockets. I found a note from Joe Carr to Pegram of the Seco bank for eleven thousand dollars. Pegram had sold it to Dustin. Then, when I got to the Hour-glass, Crew told me that Dustin had come there to tell Carr that he wanted to marry Edith..."

"Wait..." Jamison's voice took a tool edge. "Go on..."

"Then I took the car and came here..."

"To look for something in an encyclopedia," said Jamison.

Stone grinned. "You stick to the point, don't you? Look here..."

And he laid on the littered table an envelope and the cigarette that he had taken from Dustin's pocket. He emptied the envelope on the desk and fingered the contents—three or four pieces of burned cigarettes and a little pile of brown dust. Then he picked up the whole cigarette that he had taken from Dustin.

"These are not tobacco," he said. "I found the stulls in the camp where Kane must have gone with Dustin..."

Or else Dustin was there alone. I don't know. I want to find Kane. This stuff may be marabumha. I don't know it. I know it is not tobacco in any form. Do you know it? I was lookin' for marabumha in the book."
